WHILE we may still have an occasional warm day, the cool mornings and evenings demand sufficient heat and energy foods to keep the body comfortable. The housewife may safely return with a liberal meat portion to the menu, adding also a good dessert that will satisfy and help supply additional heat and energy. There are still plenty of garden products in market, and turnips, parsnips, okra and grapes tell of the last harvest. Late tomatoes are also coming in and can be used for making catsup, chill sauce and a delicious sweet pickle, as well as meatless mince from the green tomatoes. Truly the autumn months give the housewife who has been away during the summer a length-ened time to conserve for the cold, stormy days that come to us all too

And so their mothers don't have to be forever saying "He gets so dirty out playing, I just can't keep his suits looking decent. He looks so awful that I hate to have him come in to see anybody, because it looks as if he had never had any care. And that suit was perfectly clean, right out of the wash, this morning!"

The French child gets dirty at his play, of course, but his apron catches the dirt, and whenever his mother wants him to look his best for a caller, he slides off his apron and appears fresh and clean in a spotless suit.

It is just a part of their costume.

Nowadays little girls don't wear aprons to protect their pretty dresses when they go out to play; they wear glorified rompers, or overalls, and get them as dirty and torn as they want to And their mothers never think of disturbing them or expecting them to come in looking respectable when callers arrive.

You hear them not only while you after: there is little attempt to curb the youthful voice, and certainly no success at it.

TF THE apron is symbolic of the good hehavior and cleanliness of French children, as the writer of this article suggests, why isn't it just as reminis-cent of the well behaved American

A WRITER who tells about the training and manners of French children suggests that one reason for their neatness and good behavior is the apron.

The French, she says, always want to have things "presentable," and in their successful effort to make their children look well, they have made a veritable institution of the apron.

Every boy and every girl puts on an expectance.

I was certainly the pina-fore training that was responsible for it, just as it is now in France.

We couldn't endure the French training in this country; we should have no respect for children who were willing to go calling with their mothers and never go out to play alone together, always walking deliberately and quietly along with a nurse; it wouldn't be
